Per our conversation, here's a response (our September comments to the Navy are attached) to an inquiry from Rep. Pelosi's COS on questions regarding cleanup standards raised in a recent SF Chronicle article.

Let me know if you have any questions.

Robert:

Attached are EPA's September 2018 comments on the Navy's draft Five-Year Review, dated July 9, 2018. Please see General Comment #2 regarding our request that the Navy evaluate Remediation Goals to ensure they are still protective.

In our March 2018 comments on the Draft Work Plan for Radiological Survey and Sampling, and again in our August 2018 comments on the Task Specific Work Plan for Parcel G, EPA also reminded that Navy that as part of the concurrent

Five-Year Review process, the "Work Plan should use only those cleanup goals confirmed through this analysis to be protective."

We are awaiting a final response from the Navy on their commitment to perform this updated risk analysis. Another draft of the Five Year Review should arrive sometime in November.

Robert:

The Chronicle is relying on work by Dan Hirsch and we are reviewing that analysis.

As a matter of practice, every five years we review sites like Hunters Point, including the established cleanup standards for potential updating. We're doing that now and can provide you with our staff's comments to date later today.

Dear Robert:

In the last few weeks, Mike Stoker has appointed me to act as the Director of Enforcement for 4 months. I did see the article yesterday, but will have to defer to Enrique and Chris to get back to you. I will let you know when I return to my position as Chief of Staff. The new Chief of Staff, Laura Ebbert will be starting next week.

Regards,

Amy C. Miller

What is EPA's thoughts on today's Chron article on cleanup standards?
